VAT DEFAULTERS

If you know of any trader who should be VAT registered but is not for some reason, please do both them and us a favour by suggesting they meet us for an informal chat. That is not meant to sound ominous – the point is that HMRC have just launched a campaign to target what they reckon is 40,000 businesses whose turnover exceeds the annual VAT threshold of £73,000.

We can help anyone in that position by making a disclosure before HMRC come knocking on their door, and that should mean a substantial reduction in the penalty level normally charged. Unusually in this form of tax amnesty, HMRC have not said what the reduced penalty level is, but we would always fight hard to get this set at the bare minimum to reflect the particular circumstances of the case.

ANOTHER IR35 CASE WON BY IT CONTRACTOR!

Another day, another victory for an IT Contractor.

Elaine Richardson, working on behalf of ECR Consulting won an IR35 case that could have left her £50'000 out of pocket.

The tribunal concluded; "It is clear that ECR is a genuine business and therefore not a target of the IR35 investigation."

In November 2005, Richardson was given a hefty tax assessment for £50'000 after it was decided that she was a disguised employee' in an arrangement with Vertex Data Science.

Fortunately, Richardson was covered by tax investigation insurance and was represented by her accountants to the tribunals.

GOOD REASONS TO HIRE SUMMER INTERNS

Social Responsibility - Hiring summer interns can be a great PR strategy. Interns should be seen as temporary staff who will benefit from some real world business experience. As a member of the business community, hiring interns each summer shows that your firm is giving back to society – an internship is an educational experience for candidates after all.
